Our Mission: To unite Coloradans living near current and proposed oil and gas operations and other concerned citizens to pass smarter policies that prioritize health, safety, and protection of our natural resources.

Founded by a group of impacted citizens and community groups working as a coordinated voice to help bring about proactive and pragmatic oil and gas policy solutions across Colorado. We do this by:

- Engaging and educating Coloradans by helping to organize in their neighborhoods;
- Cultivating leaders;
- And by bringing about oil and gas policies that prioritize public health, safety, and protect our natural resources.

So far in 2017:

Page 2: Bringing Neighborhoods and impacted Coloradans together

Page 2: LOGIC in the News

Page 3: At the State Legislature

Page 3: Still to come in 2017

Page 4: Become a LOGIC Member today
Neighbor to Neighbor

Since the start of the year, LOGIC has worked to ensure that impacted Coloradans are coming together to share information and to change the conversation on oil and gas in their own communities and at the state level.

Adams County

In Adams County today, more than 200 new oil and gas wells are proposed. At least three large-scale developments will use Hwy 7 as a transport route.

On January 19, LOGIC partnered with the Adams County Communities for Drilling Accountability Now to host an information meeting about the proposed oil and gas wells. State Representatives, County Commissioners, City Council Members along with over 250 Adams County residents attended this meeting. At the meeting, residents expressed concerns and pushed their local governments to ensure public hearings for these large-scale oil and gas proposals.

Adams County is in the process of setting a date for a public hearing considering a 26-well site.

Triple Creek, Greeley, CO

In November of 2016, the Extraction oilrig moved into the Triple Creek Neighborhood. This 22-well site was approved by the COGCC as the first Large-Scale Urban Mitigation area site on the Front Range in Colorado. Best management practices for this site have been an ongoing negotiation with the operator.

The residents at Triple Creek are experiencing vibrations and odors just with the drilling process. LOGIC has supported the Triple Creek neighbors in their lawsuit against the COGCC, and has worked with these neighbors to help Colorado policy makers understand what it’s like to live with a large-scale oil and gas development.

Broomfield

The residents of Broomfield are facing a proposal for 139 wells. LOGIC has worked to support the Broomfield residents in fighting this unprecedented site.

LOGIC has helped to provide insight, outreach, and advocacy support to our newest neighborhood members. We have helped to turn out thousands of Broomfield residents to city council meetings to connecting residents with their state representatives at the State Capitol. LOGIC is working with the different Broomfield neighborhood groups to help with collaboration and to ensure that these residents are able to explore every possible tool in fighting this massive industrial development.
Impacted Citizens at the Legislature

As neighborhood drilling has become more frequent and larger in scale in 2017, LOGIC has worked to make sure citizens have a voice at the state legislature. This session we have:

- Supported legislation (HB1256) to move oil and gas facilities farther from school property lines so that playgrounds, athletic fields, and modular classrooms are included when an operator proposes a large-scale oil and gas facility. LOGIC worked to turn out more than 30 Coloradans to testify on this legislation to better protect kids, teachers, and parents.

- Educated legislators about what it’s like to live near a large-scale oil and gas facility. In March, Coloradans living near the Triple Creek site in Greeley hosted a brunch at the rig site for Colorado legislators. Legislators saw and heard first hand from residents living near this 22-well oil and gas rig in the drilling phase.

- Hosted lobby days at the State Capitol in Denver with impacted Coloradans. LOGIC has hosted over 30 impacted Coloradans at the capitol where these residents spoke with legislators about developments proposed in their neighborhoods and the impacts they have faced. Residents asked state legislators to lead and help in finding balanced solutions to oil and gas development in Colorado.

- Engaged impacted Coloradans to participate in the state legislative process. LOGIC hosts regular calls to update impacted neighbors on the legislative process and helps to inform residents about town hall events in their area.

LOGIC will continue through the end of the legislative session in May to advocate for pragmatic oil and gas policies at the legislature that prioritize health, safety and natural resources. Please stay tuned for a full recap of our work at the state legislature.

Still to come in 2017

Neighbor-to-Neighbor: LOGIC will continue to build the Neighbor-to-Neighbor program and bring community groups together around Colorado. Please look for our Triple Creek Story Board and Live Feed project and for our spring Neighbor-to-Neighbor programs.

Engagement and Cultivation: This spring, LOGIC will announce its 2017 Citizens Institute, a training opportunity that will help to educate neighbors around oil and gas policies, communications, and neighborhood-level organizing.

Advocacy: LOGIC will continue to make sure that impacted Coloradans have a voice at the COGCC, the State Legislature, in their local governments, and federal policy processes. LOGIC will also work to bring local organizations together around common advocacy initiatives.
Will you become a LOGIC member today?
LOGIC is working to ensure that the voices of impacted Coloradans are heard when it comes to oil and gas policies. We seek to engage and educate Coloradans and to foster a new conversation around the issue of oil and gas development. LOGIC seeks to:

- Provide access to information needed to enable communities to help policy makers make sound decisions regarding oil and gas development in Colorado.
- Assist community groups and help cultivate new leaders to participate in policy-making processes.
- Bring local groups and individuals together to advocate for energy development policies, regulations, and practices that prioritize public health, safety, and natural resources for Colorado residents.

I want to join LOGIC today:
Name: ___________________________ Phone: ___________________________
Address: ___________________________
E-Mail: ___________________________

$25 LOGIC Supporter  $40 Family Supporter
$15 Limited Income or Student Supporter  $500 LOGIC Change Agent
$100 LOGIC Sustainer  $100 LOGIC Sustainer
Other Amount

I am a member of ____________________________ and would like to be an “add on” LOGIC supporter.
$10 LOGIC Add On Supporter  $15 Add On Family

As a new supporter of LOGIC, I want to be involved and stay informed.
Let me know how I can take action today!
I’m interested in internship possibilities.
I’d like to participate in the 2016 or 2017 LOGIC Citizen’s Institute.
Volunteer with LOGIC. Here’s how I’d like to help:
I’m a computer genius and I can ____________________________
I would like to share my story about how oil and gas has impacted me.
2017 Voter Engagement and Education
Other ____________________________

P.O. Box 452  |  Erie, CO 80516